Sources for Jewish History

Greek and Latin Authors on Jews and Judaism

by Menahem Stern

A comprehensive corpus of texts relating to Jews and Judaism by the Greek and Latin authors of Antiquity. The collection furnishes valuable source material on the place of Jews and Judaism in the Mediterranean world during the rise and spread of Hellenism, concluding with concepts of Judaism held by the Neoplatonist philosophers. The writings of each author are accompanied by an introduction, a critical apparatus, an English translation and a detailed commentary in which the sources are examined in the context of the latest scholarship and archaeological findings.

141 The Inscriptions of Tiglath-pileser III, King of Assyria

Critical Edition, with Introductions, Translations and Commentary

by Hayim Tadmor

Assyrian royal scribes kept detailed records of the epoch-making campaigns and achievements of Tiglath-pileser III (r. 745–727 BCE), founder of the Neo-Assyrian Empire. The fragmentary remains of these inscriptions were discovered at Nimrud in 1845, but most of them were lost or reburied, leaving later scholars to rely on critically flawed editions.

In preparing his new edition, Hayim Tadmor returned to first-hand copies of the texts, many of them prepared at the site. Their evidence is supplemented by related inscriptions discovered at Nimrud and elsewhere. The transcribed Akkadian text is accompanied by a critical apparatus, an English translation and an extensive philological and historical commentary. The introductory material, excursuses and supplementary studies treat a panoply of scholarly issues relating to the texts, including their historical and biblical context. Copious plates show the cuneiform texts in full and illustrate their positions in the original settings.

Jewish Privileges in the Polish Commonwealth

Charters of Rights Granted to Jewish Communities in Poland-Lithuania in the Sixteenth to Eighteenth Centuries

Critical Edition of Original Latin, Polish and German Documents, with English Introductions and Notes

by Jacob Goldberg

The privileges granted to the Jewish communities in the old Polish Commonwealth played a vital role in the history of Polish Jewry and yield valuable historical information. Volumes One and Two reproduce the texts of 129 community privileges, most of which are from archives and manuscript collections in Poland. The third, companion volume contains Polish translations of the introductions and explanatory materials in Volumes One and Two.

The Jews in the Duchy of Milan

by Shlomo Simonsohn

A systematic documentary history of the Jews of Lombardy. The records reflect the contacts between the local community and groups of Jewish exiles from France, Germany, Spain and the East, as well as between Jews and non-Jews. The documents are assembled from non-Jewish archives which until now have rarely been utilized for this purpose. The documents are accompanied by English summaries.

The Jews in Piedmont

by Renata Segre

Published jointly with Tel Aviv University.

Piedmont was the chief geographical and political entity in northwestern Italy during the late Middle Ages and early modern times, its history dominated by that of the House of Savoy. Jews, largely of French extraction, settled there permanently and continuously from the second half of the fourteenth century. Their fortunes, their lives and their relations with the surrounding society and its notables are amply illustrated in this series, which, like the series on the Jews of Milan, is based primarily on documentation preserved in the archives of the region. All the documents are summarized in English, with selected texts reproduced in full in the original Latin or Italian.

Die Landjudenschaften in Deutschland als Organe jüdischer Selbstverwaltung von der frühen Neuzeit bis ins neunzehnte Jahrhundert

by Daniel Cohen

Published jointly with Akademie der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen.

The Landjudenschaften operated within German Jewry in the early part of the modern era, up to the beginning of the nineteenth century. In contrast with the autonomous institutions – the Va'adim or Medinot – of East European Jewry, which were corporations of communities, the Landjudenschaften, notwithstanding the existence of organized local communities, were essentially associations of individuals. To a large extent, they combined the functions and powers of a local community with those of an intercommunal body.

This three-volume series collects documents pertaining to the Landjudenschaften in German, Hebrew and Yiddish, accompanied by notes and historical commentary in German.

Records of the Trials of the Spanish Inquisition in Ciudad Real

by Haim Beinart

The first complete series of records of trials by the Spanish Inquisition of a specific local group, the Conversos of Ciudad Real. The verbatim testimonies recorded by the trial notaries furnish authentic evidence of the methods adopted by the Inquisition and of the relationships between the Conversos and their Christian neighbours in a city of fifteenth-sixteenth century Castile. The trials are presented in the original mediaeval Spanish, with introductions, genealogies, synopses of trials and notes in English.

History of Eretz Israel

166 Archival Sources for the History of the British Mandate in Palestine (1914–1948)

A Database of Documents in Israeli Archives

edited by Dvorah Barzilay-Yegar

This electronic catalogue of sources on the history of the British Mandate is the product of a cooperative effort of the British Academy and the Israel Academy of Sciences and Humanities to locate, catalogue, and classify archival documents relating to British Government policy towards Palestine, and to political and administrative relations between the mandatory government and the population of Palestine in the years 1914–1948.

The result of the Israeli team's work is a detailed subject index of relevant documents preserved in some 16,000 files and containers in about 440 previously uncatalogued archives and archival divisions, located in Israel's principal archival institutes and in peripheral ones, such as those of local authorities and settlements. Additional material available at the touch of a button includes information on the nature and accessibility of the archive's contents and, for personal archives, biographical information on the person and his activities in the Mandate period.

This convenient tool spares researchers of the period the tedious work of scouring archives around the country for information relevant to the subject of their research, allowing them to arrive quickly – even from a distance – at the documents they require.

Hebrew Palaeography

Codices hebraicis litteris exarati quo tempore scripti fuerint exhibentes

by Malachi Beit-Arié, Colette Sirat and Mordechai Glatzer

In the series Monumenta Palaeographica Medii Aevi: Series Hebraica; published under the auspices of the Council of Europe and the Union académique internationale.

Published jointly with the CNRS, Paris, and Brepols, Belgium.

This series is among the products of the Academy's Hebrew Palaeography Project, whose goal is to document the codicological characteristics – graphic, technical and physical – of all the surviving mediaeval Hebrew manuscripts bearing notations of date, place and copyist, to process and classify these characteristics, and thus to place at the disposal of scholars substantiated means for identifying the provenance and estimating the date of other manuscripts. The collection will include, in chronological order, all of the surviving Hebrew manuscripts in libraries throughout the world bearing dates up to 1280. Each is subjected to a detailed codicological analysis, describing the methods of its production, its design and its subsequent history. All the colophons are transcribed and translated. The manuscripts are accompanied by a rich selection of reproductions in actual size. In French and Hebrew.

Distributed by Brepols, Belgium.

Part I: Jusqu'à 1020

Part I includes the earliest surviving mediaeval Hebrew manuscripts, most of them from the collections of the Russian National Library in St. Petersburg.

ISBN 2-503-50595-3

1997. 136 pp., 55 pls. 30.5 × 44 cm. Hard cover.

Part II: 1021–1079

Part II presents 22 manuscripts bearing dates, half of them fragments taken from the Cairo Genizah. Of the rest, nine are in the Firkovich Collection in St. Petersburg, and one, produced in Italy in 1072/3, is the earliest colophon bearing a date that has survived from Europe.

ISBN 2-503-50895-2

2000. 128 pp., 62 pls. 30.5 × 44 cm. Hard cover.

Part III: 1085–1140

Part III describes 29 manuscripts, most of them fragmentary; only three codices are complete and well preserved. Seventeen (or eighteen) of the manuscripts are Genizah fragments, while nine belong to the Firkovich Collection in St. Petersburg.

ISBN 2-503-51190-2

2002. 120 pp., 83 pls. 30.5 × 44 cm. Hard cover.

Part IV: 1144–1200

Of the 32 manuscripts presented in Part IV, ten belong to the Firkovich Collection in St. Petersburg, whose contents originated in the Middle East; eight – seven of them Genizah fragments – belong to the Bodleian Library in Oxford; and the remainder are kept in various libraries in Europe. The proportion of manuscripts surviving from outside the Middle East is thus higher than in the earlier dated manuscripts, as is the proportion of whole or partial codices as against fragments.

Mediaeval Translations of Hebrew Sources

Corpus Glossariorum Biblicorum Hebraico-Gallicorum Medii Aevi

by Menahem Banitt

Part I: Le Glossaire de Bâle

The Basel glossary, one of fifteen extant manuscripts of biblical glossaries in mediaeval French, covers I Sam. iii to Amos ix. In this edition, each Hebrew word appearing in the glossary is accompanied by the French rendering and/or Hebrew explanation of the original, a transliteration into Latin characters of the French words and a translation into modern French. In two volumes:

Part II: Le Glossaire de Leipzig

The Leipzig Glossary, composed toward the end of the thirteenth century in the Norman capital of Rouen, is a complete glossary of the entire Hebrew Bible, accompanied by translations of the words of the biblical text into Old French and by numerous rabbinic interpretations. When the Jews were expelled from France in the early fourteenth century, the book was carried to the German-speaking region of southern Alsace, and translations into Middle High German were added in the margins. The parallel appearance of Hebrew, Old French and Middle High German equivalents, the latter two given both in the original vocalized Hebrew characters and in Latin transliteration, makes this text of incomparable importance to linguists of Old French, Yiddish, and early modern Hebrew alike.

by Moshé Altbauer

Vilnius Codex 262 contains a translation from Hebrew into Belorussian of several biblical books, composed just when Belorussian was emerging in its modern form. The manuscript of the five scrolls is displayed here in a complete photographic reproduction, accompanied by a transcription on facing pages. The introductory chapters and the critical commentary highlight the text's distinctiveness from other, non-Jewish translations of the Bible into Slavic, and its affinity with translations into languages of the Jewish Diaspora. The last portion of the work is a complete Belorussian-Hebrew Concordance, compiled by Dr. M. Taube.

124 The Logika of the Judaizers: A Fifteenth-Century Ruthenian Translation from Hebrew

Critical edition of the Slavic texts presented alongside their Hebrew sources with Introduction, English translation, and commentary

by Moshe Taube

In the latter part of the fifteenth century, a Jewish translator, working together with a Slavic amanuensis, translated into the East Slavic language of the Grand Duchy of Lithuania three medieval Hebrew translations of Arabic philosophical texts: the Logical Terminology, a short work on logic attributed to Maimonides (but probably by a different medieval Jewish author); and two sections of the Muslim theologian Al-Ghazālī's famous Intentions of the Philosophers. Highlighting the unexpected role played by Jewish translators as agents of cultural transmission in the heady messianic atmosphere leading up to the year 1492, these texts drew the attention of the Orthodox Church authorities as being in the possession of the enlightened heretical sect known as the Judaizers, which had emerged in Novgorod and spread to Moscow.

Reflecting three and even four layers of translation, Prof. Moshe Taube's new triple-language critical edition of the Logika of the Judaizers displays the Slavic texts alongside the Hebrew translations on which they are based and accompanies them with a modern English translation. In his comprehensive introduction and commentary, Taube surveys earlier scholarly efforts to identify the provenance and purport of the translations, discusses the linguistic and textological issues raised by these early Ruthenian texts, puts forward the likely dissimilar motivations of the Jewish translator and the Christians who commissioned the work, and reveals the translator's probable identity.

The present publication, a long-awaited desideratum, will be of interest not only to historians of the Great Duchy of Lithuania and of the principality of Muscovy, but also to scholars of Jewish history and of the history of philosophy and science, as well as to linguists studying the history of the Belorussian, Ukrainian and Russian languages.

Mediaeval Hebrew Manuscripts

173 Guide to Hebrew Manuscript Collections

Second, Revised Edition

by Benjamin Richler

Over the past two centuries, large, important collections of Hebrew manuscripts have been dispersed. Formerly private collections are now in public libraries; individual manuscripts and collections have changed hands; call-numbers have been altered; and, for some manuscripts, researchers have coined arbitrary numbers or used abridged signatures and cognomens. The first edition of Richler's Guide, published in 1994, answered the need for a systematic accounting of these wanderings, providing the reader with basic bibliographical information on the manuscripts cited in scholarly literature and with an important tool for locating them.

Since then, new catalogues of important collections have been published, hundreds of manuscripts have changed ownership as private and public collections have been sold, and previously unknown manuscripts have been discovered. Thousands of manuscripts from Eastern Europe recently made accessible to researchers have now been catalogued, enabling the identification of manuscripts hitherto considered lost. Advances in technology have made it possible to trace the present locations of additional 'lost' manuscripts: The now-computerized catalogues of the Institute of Microfilmed Hebrew Manuscripts and other libraries enable complex searches, while the plethora of resources on the Internet and the ubiquity of electronic mail have facilitated the search for information. This new edition represents a complete update and expansion of the first edition of the Guide, including the appendixes pinpointing the present locations of thousands of manuscripts and collections.

Gershom Scholem: The Man and His Work
edited by Paul Mendes-Flohr

Published jointly with State University of New York Press.

This book presents essays by several of Israel's eminent scholars, reflecting upon Gershom Scholem's impact on the academic Jewish world, and upon his life as a scholar, a Jewish thinker and an activist. The editor has provided an intellectual and spiritual biography of Scholem, which complements the papers by Ephraim Urbach, Joseph Ben-Shlomo, Isaiah Tishby, Rivka Schatz, Malachi Beit-Arié, Nathan Rotenstreich and Joseph Dan. Together, they highlight the enduring significance of Scholem's work, which has remained the touchstone for all further scholarship on Jewish mysticism and Kabbala.

The Onomasticon of Iudaea • Palaestina and Arabia in the Greek and Latin Sources

by Leah Di Segni and Yoram Tsafirir, with Judith Green

The Onomasticon, a monumental endeavor begun in the 1960s by the late Prof. Michael Avi-Yonah, collates all the known Greek and Latin literary and documentary sources mentioning geographical and ethnic names attested in Iudaea, under the Hasmonaean and Herodian dynasties, and in the Roman and Byzantine provinces of Palaestina and Arabia – an area today spread over Israel, the Palestinian Authority, Jordan, Sinai and southern Syria.

The source texts, dating from the fourth century BCE to the seventh century CE, are culled from over 1,300 texts by more than 750 separate authors, and from papyri, inscriptions and coins. The individual place names are arranged in alphabetical entries, each presenting a comprehensive collection of excerpts from the texts in which that place is mentioned. Where possible, the places are identified and described on the basis of up-to-date archaeological and bibliographical research.

Maps and Gazetteer

by Yoram Tsafrir, Leah Di Segni and Judith Green with contributions by Israel Roll and Tsvika Tsuk

This volume in the international project of mapping the Roman Empire, the Tabula Imperii Romani, covers the area of the Land of Israel west of the Jordan River, with the addition of the Golan and Sinai. The sites and place-names shown – including cities, villages, synagogues and churches, monasteries and road stations, aqueducts and roads – are those of the Roman and Byzantine provinces of Judaea and Palaestina, plotted on the basis of archaeological discoveries from the Hellenistic, Roman and Byzantine periods. The accompanying Gazetteer contains short descriptions of the sites, comprehensive references to ancient sources (including epigraphic and numismatic material) and bibliographical references to modern studies.

International Colloquium in Memory of Jacob L. Talmon
edited by Zeev Sternhell

The issues treated in this volume – romanticism vs. rationalism, nationalism vs. pluralism, militarism vs. humanism, religious/moral values vs. tolerance – are as timely today as they were in the period leading up to the rise of Fascism and Nazism in Europe. The volume brings together in an easily accessible form the approaches and methodologies of eighteen scholars, each an internationally renowned expert in his or her field, unafraid to evaluate critically ideological streams that were and remain crucial to the progress of modern history.

New Methods of Geostatistical Analysis and Graphical Presentation: Distributions of Populations over Territories

by Roberto Bachi

Published jointly with Kluwer/Plenum, USA.

This book presents an integrated system of methods for dealing with geographical statistics (geostatistics) and their applications, making it possible to overcome many of the difficulties encountered in graphically presenting, processing, analyzing and comparing spatial data over different territorial units. The term 'population' should be understood in its widest possible sense, to include events such as births, deaths and accidents; establishments and institutions of different kinds; and various services and economic activities – any kind of phenomenon that can be described in spatial-geographical terms. These are the basic building blocks with which this book deals, comparing them with each other and with the geographical features of the territory itself.

Flora Palaestina

The first Flora specific to Israel and surrounding areas. Its four parts, each comprising one volume of text and one of plates, treat some 2,470 species to be found at this meeting point of four phytogeographical regions. Many of the species and varieties included are described here for the first time or renamed since the second edition of Post's Flora. The descriptions, with few exceptions, are based on plants deposited in the Herbarium of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

209 Distribution Atlas of Plants in the Flora Palaestina Area
by Avinoam Danin

This volume comprises updated nomenclature, distribution, and habitat data for the species in the area covered in the four parts of Flora Palaestina. The distribution data are presented here in individual maps for each of the species recorded in the study area (defined as lying west of 36°E).

Four main phytogeographical regions – the Mediterranean, Irano-Turanian, Saharo-Arabian, and Sudanian – meet in Israel. The area's broad climatic and edaphic diversity is largely responsible for its botanical wealth – some 9.06 species per 100 sq. km. Of the 2,750 species listed herein, 276 were not previously recorded in Flora Palaestina.

The 18,000 species-per-district records that form the basis of Flora Palaestina have been expanded to some 28,400, based largely on the author's investigations over the course of some forty years.

208 The Bryophyte Flora of Israel and Adjacent Regions
edited by C. Clara Heyn and Ilana Herrnstadt

Part I: Bryopsida (Mosses), by Ilana Herrnstadt and C. Clara Heyn

Part II: Anthocerotopsida (Hornworts) and Marchantiopsida (Liverworts), by Helene Bischler and Suzanne Jovet-Ast

With drawings by Michal Boaz-Yuval and Esther Huber and colour photographs
by David Darom

This new addition to the Flora Palaestina series represents an up-to-date account of the bryophytes of Israel and some adjacent regions. Despite its small area, this region has been found to have an unexpected diversity of bryophytes. The 259 taxa – 220 of mosses and 39 of liverworts – comprise 9% of the described flora of Israel. 87 taxa were recorded in Israel for the first time during the preparation of this Flora.

The surviving editor, Ilana Herrnstadt, was awarded the Medal in Silver of the Organization for the Phytotaxonomic Investigation of the Mediterranean area (OPTIMA).

by Heinrich Mendelssohn and Yoram Yom-Tov

This is the first systematic presentation in English of information gathered on the terrestrial mammals (including bats) of Israel. The Introduction briefly describes the physical and biological characteristics of the study area; the zoogeography and ecology of the mammals of Israel and the impact of humans on their conservation, distribution, and populations; and the history of mammal research in Israel. The account of each species presents details regarding its distribution, fossil record (when available), karyotype, ecology, diet, behaviour, reproduction, parasites and relations with humans, accompanied by a distribution map, skull photos, and tables of the body and skull characters of specimens deposited in Israeli museums. The documentation is complemented by a rich selection of colour photographs.
